Additionally, online sites like Craigslist or Facebook Marketplace may have used farm equipment for sale. Asking other local farmers if they have any equipment for sale allows you to easily transport the machinery to your farm, and also makes it easy to inspect the machines in person before buying. Always be careful when working with and around farm machinery, and enjoy your work. I've got no gripes with that and I'm not about to argue with Peter Hooton's philosophy on All Together Now - but the sentiment, 'let's go home', it just works for us. Hooton says the song's meaning has been diluted through its various uses. This can be a great place to start your search for used machinery. He finds it difficult to listen to the football and techno versions, but he'll always be moved by the original. And he's been spreading the word at work, as a serving soldier in the Queen's Royal Hussars and now the Reservists. He went to a school in Bootle, Merseyside recently where the children sang his song and read out World War I poetry. "When I was in Iraq in 2008 I was part of the transition, teaching Iraqi soldiers British military skills. Doing this might open up larger implement dealers in bigger towns to you, or you can watch online sites like eBay or others. "It got me so angry. Ask the seller if you can view and inspect the machines before purchasing. Go Long Distance if you can't find what you need nearby and you aren't concerned with arranging transportation, you may want to expand the geographical range of your search. It became a squadron and then regiment custom to play it at the end of every tour. Besides being fun to attend, nearby farm auctions will again make the transportation process easier. Also, older machinery may lack certain modern safety features. Hooton says he wrote the lyrics after watching the late Labour politician Michael Foot being criticised for wearing a "donkey jacket" at the cenotaph in London on Remembrance Sunday. And the band, who are still together, are celebrating with a gig in Liverpool followed by a rave at a secret venue. And it worked - because it brought barriers down. "I know it's an anti-war song. It isn't always easy to transport farm machinery long distances, so beginning the search locally can help make this process simpler. Attend Nearby Auctions! Farm auctions are another option for finding used farm machinery. People across a divide who probably had more in common with each other than the people who had sent them to war in the first place," says Hooton. The song reached number four in the charts in December 1990. I thought I'd inject a bit of fun into it, so I got this squadron of Iraqi soldiers to sing the chorus. Everyone has to start somewhere, and for the beginner or hobby farmer, starting the process of obtaining farm machinery might be challenging. In some cases, this can be true. On Craigslist, check the "Farm & Garden" pages. Corporal Wheeler says: "Life throws so much crap at us from time to time. But whilst the song has been used in numerous ways over the last two decades, many people don't know what it's actually about. Some used farm machinery that is in good working condition may continue to function properly for many years to come, and may cost much less than similar brand new equipment. "That was very moving for me, very poignant." This week, All Together Now has been re-released, this time for the charity Operation Shoebox, which sends gifts in shoeboxes to soldiers serving in Afghanistan. There may be an inspection time offered before the auction starts, to give you a good chance to look over all the machinery before bidding. Watch Classified Ads and Craigslist! Your local newspaper's classified ads may be a source for used farm machinery, particularly if you live in a rural, farming region. Let's briefly explore some of these questions. Is Used Really a Better Value? A beginner farmer - or a farmer who isn't necessarily farming for profit, but doing it as a hobby - might not have a large budget for purchasing farm machinery, so buying used might seem like the best value. It was used too by Atomic Kitten and Goleo VI, as a World Cup song in Germany 2006. But since its release 20 years ago it's been used in numerous ways - losing that all important meaning in the process. Hooton says the idea of a spirit stronger than war is as important today as it ever was. One helpful tip is to try to find an operators manual of the machine you purchase, and follow its directions for use. However, inexpensive used equipment may not be such a good deal if it needs extensive repairs, repainting, new tires, etc... In these cases, used machinery can eventually cost much more than the initial purchase price. Do you try to buy used machinery first? It's been used in adverts, for countless football team songs, including Everton FC, Euro 2004 and most recently Barrow AFC for their FA Trophy campaign. "They would have been proud that someone like Michael Foot was there to remember them, whatever he was wearing." Image caption, All Together Now has been re-released in aid of a charity helping soldiers in Afghanistan. He says even though the song is better associated with football than war nowadays, there's no ambiguity about the meaning. One of the lyrics states: "A spirit stronger than war was at work that night, December 1914, cold, clear and bright." "It's about the working classes being sent to war. "They took away the words 'no man's land' because I don't think they wanted a reference to the war," Hooton says. Corporal Jay Wheeler calls himself The Farm's number one fan. I thought, here's someone representing the soldiers in the trenches who were full of lice, surrounded by vermin. That song, in whatever form, will kind of put the world to rights in its own little way. "Perhaps in the end that's all the protest song writer can ever really expect: simply to help people to put their own individual worlds to rights. When Peter Hooton, lead singer of Liverpool band, The Farm, wrote his anti-war song, All Together Now, he probably wasn't expecting it to be used as a World Cup song for Germany 2006. All Together Now, probably The Farm's best known song, was released 20 years ago this month. If so, where do you start looking? He says at the end of every tour his squadron would have a party and he would insist the song was played. Weigh all of these considerations and more before making a purchase.
